SCANDAL AT WASHINGTON. and its Consequences.

Our Washington advices indicate widespread indignation in that brilliant but somewhat idle capital anent the publication, in the New York World of the statement that a prominent Senator had asked for the recall of Count Sala of the French Legation. The reason alleged was a purely personal, not to say domestic one, being asserted that Count Sala was paying too much attention to the Senator's wife and had, in fact, already compromised her reputation, to say nothing of her husband's peace of mind.

It would hardly be fair to mention the name of the lady involved in this nasty scandal, even for the purpose of defending her from a calumny which is baseless. We can safely assert that all the appearances in the case point to the lady's entire innocence, both in fact and in her husband's esteem, since he is a constant companion of Count Sala, and it is nearly always by his invitation that the Count joins his family party, at the theater, on the promenade, driving, or at such society manifestations as the recent paper chase, of which abundant mention has been made in these columns. The gossip appears to be purely malicious and to be unworthy of the notice of decent people. There is one observation, however, which we feel called upon to make, and that is, that the somewhat overgrown crop of scandal produced at Washington during the present season is nothing but the legitimate product of the social conditions prevailing there-conditions unwholesome and vicious and incapable of direct from the publishers. yielding any fruit other than sorrow and shame and trouble. One has only to visit Washington when the season is fairly under way, and watch the reckless fury of the chase after notoriety, in order to realize the full portent and significance of the situation. The hysterical eagerness with which the great multitude strives to attract public attention; the unquestionsuffering from diseased liver that a pretensions, no matter how transparsovereign remedy has been discovered, ently pinchbeck are permitted to gass current; the garish ostentation, the vulgar scramble for publicity-all these indications conspire to impress the thoughtful observer with the danger and prepare him for the inevitable consequences of yo people whose atmosphere is pure mischievous a condition of thangs.
